No other aviation artist captures the feel and thrill of fast jet low level flying like Michael Rondot, and he has done it again with PAVEWAY TORNADOS – creating another superbly detailed composition charged with the power and atmosphere so characteristic of his paintings.

In this remarkably accurate portrayal of low level action at sunset he features a pair of FLIR-equipped Tornado GR4s carrying a TIALD laser designator pod and GBU-24 Paveway III laser guided bombs. These weapons, used to such devastating effect during the Gulf War by USAF F-111F and F-117A Black Jet aircraft, now give the RAF the same capability to attack targets with pinpoint accuracy, both day and night, in adverse weather and from all altitudes.

PAVEWAY TORNADOS is beautifully produced on heavyweight archival paper and each print in the single limited edition is signed and numbered and embossed with the Collectair seal to guarantee the edition size.

ARTIST'S PROOFS and REMARQUED PRINTS

We are often asked, 'What is an artist's proof?' A Collectair artist's proof is a print from the artist's private collection. Although some publishers charge a very high price for artist's proofs, they are identical to the rest of the edition except that instead of being allocated a number, they are marked Artist's Proof or AP and then signed and sometimes numbered. In exceptional cases, artist's proofs carry a number of additional signatures.

A remarque is an original signed and dated pencil drawing applied by the artist to the border of the print. Each drawing is unique, adding a personal touch and enhancing the value of the print. At £114, a remarked copy of PAVEWAY TORNADOS is an affordable way of owning a Michael Rondot original.
